Acknowledgments

I owe a debt of gratitude to many people who, in one way or another, assisted in and contributed to (some may say aided and abetted in) the creation of this text. I prevailed upon friends and colleagues to read, comment upon and correct earlier versions of various chapters knowing that my requests were at best an imposition, and not infrequently a nuisance. Nevertheless, all responded with grace and generosity and the final product is far better as a result. Particularly, I am indebted to George Conk, David Frisch, Robert Lipkin, Michael Risinger and John Wladis for lending their particular expertise to this project.

I am also grateful to the student research assistants who spent many hours for ludicrously little money digging through cases, proofreading, cite checking and, more importantly, telling me when I had succeeded in making difficult concepts utterly incomprehensible. Past and present Widener law students Kevin Bright, Carmen DiMario, Matt Eltringham, Sara Gross and Kelly Tracy deserve special thanks.

Finally, of course, I need to thank my family. Not only did Melinda take on the Herculean task of proofreading and correcting earlier versions of the manuscript, but everyone pretended they were interested in hearing me talk about it.
