

Urbanization
and
African Cultures

Urbanization and African Cultures

Edited by Toyin Falola
and
Steven J. Salm

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2005
Toyin Falola and Steven J. Salm
All Rights Reserved

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Urbanization and African cultures / edited by Toyin Falola and Steven J. Salm.
p. cm.

“Chapters presented here were originally presented at an international conference on ‘African Urban Spaces: History and Culture’ held at the University of Texas at Austin from March 28 to April 30, 2003”—Ack.

Includes bibliographical references.

ISBN 0-89089-558-9

1. Urbanization—Social aspects—Africa—Congresses. 2. City and town life—Africa—Congresses. 3. Popular culture—Africa—Congresses. 4. Urban geography—Africa—Congresses. 5. City and town life in literature—Congresses. I. Falola, Toyin. II. Salm, Steven J., 1966- III. Title.

HT384.A35 U729 2004
307.76'096—dc22

2004020241

Carolina Academic Press
700 Kent St.
Durham, NC 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 493-5668
www.cap-press.com

Printed in the United States of America

For Michel Doortmont and Axel Harneit-Sievers, two great friends

Contents

	Acknowledgments	x
	Contributors	xi
Part A
Making Sense of African Cities
Chapter 1	Urban Cultures: The Setting and the Situational Toyin Falola	3
Chapter 2	Urban Cultures: Relevance and Context Catherine Coquery-Vidrovitch	17
Part B
Fictions
Chapter 3	Ambivalent Spaces and the Carnavalesque in Tutuola's Palm-Wine Drinkard Tera Maxwell	25
Chapter 4	Spaces and Boundaries in Zula Sofola's Song of a Maiden Daintee Glover Jones	41
Chapter 5	The Urban Heroine in Nigerian Female Fiction Ijeoma C. Nwajaku	51
Chapter 6	The Plight of Poor Women in Modernity and Tradition in Tess Onwueme's Tell It To Women and Shakara: Dance-Hall Queen Juliette F. Bartlett-Pack	63
Chapter 7	Urban Spaces and Lost Voices in Tess Onwueme's Tell It to Women Elizabeth Brown-Guillory	81
Chapter 8	The African City and Heteroglossia in the Works of Buchi Emecheta Dennis M. Lensing	89
Chapter 9	Soyinka's First Fieldtrip Bernth Lindfors	107

Part C
Popular Cultures

Chapter 10	The Decolonization of Ghanaian Popular Entertainment E. John Collins	119
Chapter 11	Creating the Postcolonial City: Urban Youth Clubs in Senegal Susann Baller	139
Chapter 12	Meanings and Challenges of Modern Urban Music in Senegal Ndiouga Benga	155
Chapter 13	Popular Music, Identity, and the Lumpen Youth of Nairobi Steven J. Salm	167
Chapter 14	Strategic Minstrelsy: Les Têtes Brulées and the Claim for Black Modernism Dennis M. Rathnaw	185
Chapter 15	From Coal Depot to Cesária's Home: Mindelo at the Crossroads of the World João M. Monteiro	201
Chapter 16	Remembering and Forgetting: Commemorations Public Events in a Tuareg Setting Susan Rasmussen	211
Chapter 17	Durban Works Barbara Harlow	235
Chapter 18	Thron Church: An Urban Religion in Cotonou L. Djisovi Ikukomi Eason	247
Chapter 19	Wagogo Leo! The Production of Rural Culture in Urban Dar es Salaam Gregory H. Maddox	259
Chapter 20	Welcome to Our Hillbrow: An Elegy for African Cosmopolitanism Neville Hoad	267
Chapter 21	Linguistic and Sociocultural Hybridization in Senegalese Urban Spaces Fallou Ngom	279
Chapter 22	Nigerian Pidgin English, Urban Spaces and the Construction of Social Identity Attah Anthony Agbali	295
Chapter 23	Ojuelegba: The Sacred Profanities of a West African Crossroad Bibi Bakare-Yusuf and Jeremy Weate	323

Part D
Histories and Complexities

Chapter 24	Residential Segregation in African Cities Catherine Coquery-Vidrovitch	343
------------	--	-----

Chapter 25	Celebrating the Hybridity of Cultures: History, Power, and Identity in Kutigi since 1770 Constanze Weise	357
Chapter 26	The Influence of the Family on the Rise of Igbo State Unionism in Urban Colonial Nigeria 1916–1966 Raphael Chijioke Njoku	385
Chapter 27	Law, Change, Human Rights, and Development in South Africa C.M. van der Bank	405
Chapter 28	Where There Is a Way There Is a Will: How Traditional African Homesteads Reflect the Legal Consequences of Succession David Taylor	417
Chapter 29	African Cities and the Globalization of Disease: The Influenza Pandemic of 1918–1919 Matthew M. Heaton	433
	Index	451

Acknowledgments

The chapters presented here were originally presented at an international conference on African Urban Spaces: History and Culture held at the University of Texas at Austin from March 28 to April 30, 2003. The conference brought together scholars of African urban studies from different parts of the world to discuss important issues in the field. We want to thank all the contributors who, despite security and financial concerns, traveled long distances to be with us in Texas. Presenters and participants engaged in lively discussion throughout the three-day period and spent time revising their papers for publications in the subsequent months.

Such an undertaking does not come without copious debts. We are grateful to a host of graduate students (Kirsten Walles, Tyler Fleming, Ann Genova, Matthew Heaton, and Christian Jennings); the technical personnel (Sam Saverance and Peter Siegesmund); and many staff of the University of Texas (Laura Flack and Martha Gail Moore). The organizations and departments that supported us financially include the Departments of History and English, the Center for African and African American Studies, the Center for Middle Eastern Studies, the Office of the Vice President, the LBJ School of Public Affairs, the University Co-Op, and the Urban Issues Program. The essays by Catherine Coquery-Vidrovitch were translated by Ann Cooper, to whom we express our gratitude. Sam Saverance worked with the illustrations.

Contributors

Anthony Attah Agbali is a Ph.D. candidate in the department of Anthropology at Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan. An ordained Catholic Priest, he has studied Philosophy, Theology, Religious Studies and Communications (Radio and Television), with degrees from the University of Ibadan, and Pontifical Urban University, Rome, Italy. His far ranging research interests relates to the themes of Religion and Spirituality, Social Movements, Human Rights, Development, International Migration and social structures and systems. His personal interests and hobbies include music, writing and avid reading, photography, and composing poetry.

Bibi Bakare-Yusuf is an independent scholar. Her research interests focus on feminist theory and politics, cultural studies and phenomenology. She graduated with a PhD in Interdisciplinary Women and Gender Studies from the University of Warwick. She is currently working on issues of love, intimacy and sexuality amongst Yoruba women.

Susann Baller studied African Studies, Political Science and Musicology at Humboldt-University of Berlin. She has just started writing her doctoral thesis in African History. Her specific area of research are urban youth clubs and soccer in a suburban area of Dakar. Currently she is a recipient of a study fellowship of the Wissenschaftskolleg of Berlin and assisting Professor Abdul Sheriff in his research about dhows in the Indian Ocean.

Ndiouga Benga is a senior lecturer with the Department of History, University Cheikh Anta Diop, Dakar, Senegal. He has taught courses and researched into urban contemporary processes in a long perspective. His present work is on urban violence, streets arts and the individualization process. He was a recipient of Social Science Research Council, Africa Program Fellowships in 2002.

Elizabeth Brown-Guillory, Ph.D., is a playwright, performing artist, and professor of English at the University of Houston. She has written twelve plays, published three books, and dozens of essays on black women's theater and has given more than one hundred lectures and creative presentations nationally and internationally. Her most recent play When the Ancestors Call was performed May 1-June 15, 2003, at Eta Creative Arts Foundation in Chicago. She is at work on Hoodoo Blues: Conjuring in Alice Childrens' Plays.

John Collins has been active in the Ghanaian/West African music scene since 1969 as a band leader, music union activist, journalist and film/radio consultant. He has published six books on African popular music. Collins obtained his first degree (sociology and archaeology) from the University of Ghana in 1972 and his doctorate in ethnomusicology at the State University of New York at Buffalo in 1994. In 1987 made an honorary life-member of the International Association for the Study of Popular Music (IASPM). During the 1990s, Collins was technical director of the three-year joint Universities of Ghana/Mainz African Music Redocumentation Project, and for seven years was with the Ghana National Folklore Board of Trustees/Copyright Administration. He is currently an associate professor in Department of Music at the University of Ghana at Legon where he has been teaching since 1995. He is also manager of Bokoor Recording Studio, acting chairman of the BAPMAF African Popular Music Archives NGO, and leader of the Local Dimension, a highlife band.

Catherine Coquery-Vidrovitch is professor emeritus of modern African history at the University Paris-7-Denis-Diderot, and adjunct professor at State University of New York at Binghamton, Department of Sociology. She trained numerous French speaking African historians in Paris and in African universities. She has published many books, two of which have been translated into English: Africa South of the Sahara, Endurance and Change, the University of California Press (1987), and African Women, a Modern History, Westview Press (1998). A third one is forthcoming: African Urbanization from the Beginnings to Colonialism, Markus Wiener, Princeton. She has edited more than twenty books on African studies and the third world and received the 1999 ASA (African Studies Association) Distinguished Africanist Award in Philadelphia. She has been a member (2000-2005) of the ICHS (International Conference of Historical Sciences) international Bureau since August 2000.

Louis Djisovi Eason received the Ph.D. in American Culture Studies from Bowling Green State University, where he is a faculty member, Director of Education Transformations through Cultural Arts, and Coordinator of the Drum Circle for World Peace. His specialized area of research is Ifa/Fa traditions among the Yoruba and the Fon and among African Americans in the United States.

Barbara Harlow is the Louann and Larry Temple Centennial Professor of English Literature at The University of Texas at Austin. She is the author of Resistance Literature (1986), Barred: Women, Writing, and Political Detention (1992), After Lives: Legacies of Revolutionary Writing (1996), and co-editor with Mia Carter of Imperialism and Orientalism: A Documentary Sourcebook (1999). She is currently working on an intellectual biography of the South African activist, Ruth First.

Matthew M. Heaton is a graduate student at the University of Texas at Austin. His research focuses on the history of medicine and witchcraft in Nigeria.

Neville Hoad is an assistant professor of English at the University of Texas at Austin. He received a Ph.D. in English literature from Columbia University in 1998 and from 1998 to 2001 was a Harper/Schmidt postdoctoral fellow at the University of Chicago. He has published articles on questions of sexuality in colonial and contemporary Africa in GLQ: A Journal of Lesbian and Gay Studies, Postcolonial Studies, Development Update and in several anthologies.

Daintee Glover Jones is a Ph.D. Candidate in English Literature at the University of Houston. Her research focuses on contemporary dramatic literature written by women of the African diaspora. Her published works include biographical entries for Black Drama Biographies (Myrtle Smith Livingston) and An Ann Poetry Encyclopedia (Hilary Holladay). Her essay, "Zulu Sofola and Feminist Consciousness," appeared in Nigeria in the Twentieth Century.

Dennis Lensing is adjunct professor in the Liberal Studies Division of Huston-Tillotson College, a historically black college in Austin, TX. He is presently a Ph.D. candidate in English literature at the University of New Mexico, researching and writing his dissertation on postwar American fiction and the construction of a new consumerist ethic. His essay "Pariah among Pariahs: Images of the IV Drug User in the Context of AIDS" appeared in the Fall 2002 issue of Americana: The Journal of American Popular Culture, 1900-Present, and he won the South Central Modern Language Association's 2001 Gender Studies Award for his essay "Hymen as Hydra in Fanny Hill."

Bernth Lindfors, a Professor of English and African literatures at the University of Texas at Austin, has written and edited a number of books on African literature and performance, including Africans on Stage: Studies in Ethnological Show Business (1999), Black African Literature in English, 1992-1996 (2000), and Africa Talks Back: Interviews with Anglophone African Writers (2002).

Gregory H. Maddox is an associate professor of history at Texas Southern University in Houston. He is the author of several pieces on the environmental history of Tanzania and on the production of historical knowledge among the Gogo people of central Tanzania. His book, Writing the Gogo: An Intellectual History, is forthcoming.

Tera Maxwell is a Ph.D. student of English literature at the University of Texas at Austin with a concentration in ethnic and third world literature. Her research in Filipino American literature focuses on the Filipina domestic worker and the trauma of globalization. Her interests range from trauma and memory, to the novel as a genre.

Joao M. Monteiro is an assistant professor of sociology at Salve Regina University in Newport, Rhode Island. He has a Ph.D. from Drew University, and has lectured at several colleges and universities in the New England region. From 1997 to 2000, he was field director for the summer program in Cape Verde at the University of Rhode Island / Rhode Island College. His article "Heroes, Ghosts and Politicians: Amilcar Cabral and the Democratic Transition in Cape Verde" will appear in Liberation Philosophy: The Life and Thoughts of Amilcar Cabral, edited by John Fobanjong and Thomas Ranuga, currently under review. His areas of interest include Cape Verde and the Cape Verdean diaspora, religion, immigration, and development issues.

Fallou Ngom, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of French & Linguistics in the Department of Modern and Classical Languages at Western Washington University. His research focuses primarily on the interaction between African languages and non-African languages in Senegal, West Africa. His scholarly works have appeared in The International Journal of the Sociology of Language, Journal of Multilingual and Multicultural Development, Encyclopedia of the World's Major Languages, The Studies in the Linguistic Sciences, and The French Review. He is the author of two books on linguistics.

Raphael Chijioke Njoku, Ph.D., was a lecturer in the Department of History/Political Science, Alvan Ikoku College of Education, Owerri, Nigeria. His publications have appeared in several books and journals.

Ijeoma C. Nwajiaku who holds a B.A. and an M.A in English from the University of Ibadan, Nigeria, is presently teaching in the Department of Languages at the Federal Polytechnic Oko, Anambra State, Nigeria. She has published in journals and books, including Nigeria in the Twentieth Century edited by Toyin Falola.

Juliette Bartlett Pack, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of English at Texas Southern University where she teaches Africana literature, and the University of Phoenix at Houston, Texas. She completed her graduate study at the University of Houston focusing on literature of diverse cultures. Her dissertation is titled Promoting Empowerment For Women: Women Between Modernity and Tradition in The Works of Tess Onwueme. Dr. Bartlett Pack's research focuses on literature including drama and fiction of women of color in the African diaspora. Her essay, "Modernity and Tradition in the plays of Tess Onwueme," appeared in Nigeria in the Twentieth Century.

Susan Rasmussen is professor of anthropology at the University of Houston, Texas. She is author of three books: Spirit Possession and Personhood among the Kel Ewey Tuareg (Cambridge 1995), The Poetics and Politics of Tuareg Aging: Life Course and Personal Destiny in Niger (Northern Illinois University Press 1997); and Healing in Community: Medicine, Contested Terrains, and Cultural Encounters among the Tuareg (Bergin & Garvey 2001). Her articles on religion, gender, aging, ethnographic analysis, and issues of representation and artisan roles appear in such journals as American Anthropologist, American Ethnologist, Anthropological Quarterly, Journal of Anthropological Research, Africa, and Journal of American Folklore. She is currently writing a book on Tuareg herbalism and issues of religion, science, and gender.

Dennis M. Rathnaw holds a BA from the University of Michigan and an M.M, from the University of Texas at Austin. He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in ethnomusicology at Texas, focusing on Central African popular music. His research includes the interaction between media and politics in the production of bikutsi in Cameroon, while he is specifically interested in people's creative response to, and use of, global media. Rathnaw founded, and for five years has directed Easy Motion Tourist, an Afro-pop band.

David Taylor is an associate professor at the University of South Africa. He is also an attorney and provides consultancy services specializing in IT law. David also has published in the field of IT and IT law, language and law and indigenous law. He was awarded the principal's prize for the most promising young legal researcher for 2001–2002.

C.M. van der Bank, raised on a farm in the South African Bushveld, obtained a BA (Cum Laude) at Pretoria University, B Proc, LL B and LLM at Unisa, and an LL.D at PU for CHE during 2002. Dr. Bank is currently employed by the Vaal Triangle Technikon as a principal lecturer and has published three books on Human Rights.

Jeremy Weate is a philosopher and independent scholar. His research focuses on three main areas: existential phenomenology, race theory and architectural theory. He graduated with a Ph.D. in European philosophy from the University of Warwick in 1998. He has taught at the University of Warwick, the Architectural Association, the Bartlett School of Architecture, The University of Brighton and the Royal College of Art. He is currently working on a book on invisibility.

Constanze Weise has conducted extensive fieldwork in Nigeria and archival research in Nigeria, United Kingdom, and the U.S. on the cultural history of the pre-colonial Nupe kingdom and its successor states with special focus on kingship rituals, festivals and ceremonies. She is presently completing a doctoral thesis on history and memory among the Nupe in the field of historical anthropology in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Bayreuth, Germany.

